ABSTRACT

Bullying is a serious problem that can dramatically affect the ability of students to progress academically and socially. The research project was carried out in public boarding schools in Mwingi District to find out the causes and effects of bullying on the victims. The study area was chosen on the basis of its setup which represent a rural urban context hence the cases of bullying are applicable to all schools in Kenya ultimately the project aimed at generating data and information useful to education managers and policy makers and bringing out to their awareness that bullying still persist despite the barn. In chapter one the research highlights various cases of bullying that have been reported, it also looked broadly at various research carried out by people on the same issues of bullying this chapter also highlights the bullying also taking places in schools that's quite different from what used to be experienced in the 1970 moods of bullying have changed and this aspect has been brought out in the open in order to facilitate the policy makers to deal with this vice in boring secondary schools in Kenya .

Chapter two on literature reviews explores various research carried out in western countries on bullying and the effect the victims in showed that bullying needed to be investigated thoroughly in order to identify its root cause and its impact on the victim. Chapter three the research focuses on the research design, data collation, and data analysis the study uses self-administered questioners to both the guidance and counseling teachers and students through the content differed .the interview schedule will be administered to the deputy head teacher who's content should be relevant to the self-administered questioners .data should be analyses using statically package for social sciences Programmer.
