This article discusses on early childhood education school dropout and the possible factors that promote this problem in Isinya zone Kajiado district. It usually understood that children are its future workers, citizens, and leaders. Education remains the major tool by which people become empowered and the economic, social, and personal well-being of all citizens in a pluralistic society increases.

A high dropout rate diminishes the pool of qualified people from diverse backgrounds who will enter the professional and political ranks that make important public policy decisions. The mission for every school should be to educate students to equip them to become knowledgeable, responsible, socially skilled, healthy, caring, and contributing citizens.
